

MyClaim Personal Moore Blatch Resolve solicitor awarded Corporate Partnership Award

A solicitor at leading law firm Moore Blatch Resolve has been presented with a Corporate Partnership Award at the Annual Meeting of the Encephalitis Society.

Partner and head of clinical negligence at the firm, Tim Spring, was presented with the award by President of the charity, Professor Barbara Wilson OBE, following recognition of his dedication and commitment to the Society, which he is also a Trustee of.

The aim of the Society is to improve the quality of life of people affected by Encephalitis, a life threatening illness caused by an infection which affects the brain. As a consequence many people are left with an acquired brain injury, the degree and severity of which may vary.

Tim Spring comments: "The work the charity does is invaluable and ensures that support and information is given to those affected by Encephalitis. It also endeavours to raise awareness of the condition and strives for the services offered to sufferers to be improved.

"Moore Blatch Resolve has been a keen supporter of this charity for nine years. We offer continued support to our clients who may have medical negligence cases, or who just need advice, by providing financial support, attending related events and seminars, and by helping the Society with pro bono legal work."