

MyClaim Solicitors strengthen their position in the Chambers ranking

Leading Southampton-based law firm Moore Blatch Resolve has been highly ranked in Chambers' 2009 list of top law firms.

Chambers has 100 experienced researchers who investigate the legal profession in all the main areas of practice. It interviews and talks to clients to find out which law firms they use and how they rate them for their legal ability and client service. Based on the results of this research, it identifies the world's top lawyers and firms. Law firms and individual lawyers are ranked in bands from one-six, with one being the best.

Moore Blatch Resolve's clinical negligence team has been placed in the top band - band one, moving up a band from last year. The 'highly skilled and experienced' team led by 'super lawyer' Tim Spring, deals with a wide-range of complex cases, representing patients and their families in medical negligence claims. The highly successful team is described as 'going from strength to strength'.

Its personal injury team is also ranked very highly, achieving a band two status for the second year running. Offering expertise across a whole range of personal injury work, the team's solicitors are described as offering 'clear, honest advice and a friendly, prompt and conscientious approach.'

Damian Horan, head of legal practice at Moore Blatch Resolve, comments: "We are extremely pleased to have been ranked so highly by such a respected and trusted source as Chambers. "This demonstrates our continued growth within our chosen sectors and our sensitive and professional approach to handling often complex and difficult cases."
